INTERNATIONALISATION of European Higher Education

The Essential Guide to the Internationalisation of European HE Institutions

Approaching the issue of internationalisation from an institutional perspective, this new Handbook will be a valuable tool for all higher education institutions. Specifically designed as a source of information and reference, it will be an essential guide to developing and implementing internationalisation strategies and measures. The Handbook focuses on the key issues of practical and operational interest in relation to European higher education and displays them in the context of global developments and overarching policy processes. In addition, it will facilitate discussion on the goals of internationalisation at institutional level and their implementation.

ISSUES COVERED INCLUDE:

- Designing institutional internationalisation policies and strategies
- Establishing partnerships, alliances and other mechanisms for international cooperation
- Internationalisation of research and innovation
- Internationalisation of learning and teaching process
- Information, support and advisory services
- Promotion and marketing
- The future of internationalisation for higher education

An indispensable tool for University leadership and International Offices

The Handbook is designed specifically for those involved in developing and implementing internationalisation strategies and measures, including university leadership and international office managers. It will also be an invaluable point of reference for a broader group of policy makers interested in internationalisation in a wider European context.

Edited by EUA and ACA

The Handbook is jointly edited by the European University Association and the Academic Cooperation Association with the support of an expert international Advisory Board.

Lesley Wilson is Secretary General of the European University Association

Bernd Wächter is Director of the Academic Cooperation Association

Published by RAABE academic publishers

After the great success of the EUA Bologna Handbook, RAABE presents its new handbook on internationalisation to further support higher education in Europe. As the editors of the Bologna Handbook are again involved in this handbook, the high quality standard of the articles is guaranteed.
